Employee Attendance Widget

The Employee Attendance widget displays the current time clock status of all employees reporting to you. This will be especially useful when you need to easily see how many employees are presently clocked in or how many hours have been worked. It can also be used to quickly determine if someone on your team is late, clocked in too early, missed their shift, has scheduled leave, or is about to hit daily overtime.

6 Exempt, 18 Clocked In, 2 Clocked Out, 2 Not Clocked In, 2 Out / Leave

Employee Name	Current Status	7/6	7/7	Today	7/9	7/10

Diaz, Victor D	IN: 8:15	8:00		0:43

Dough, Janice	OUT: 12:01	4:00	8:15	6:50
Logan, Charles B	Not Clocked In	8:00	8:00

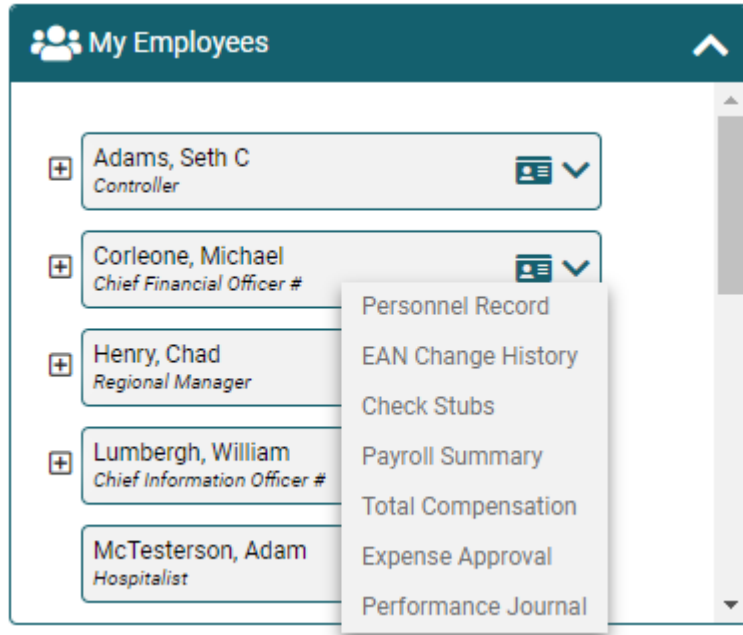

Based on time clock entries in the ExponentHR Time Reporting system, the widget also displays the current date and the prior/next two days, including the total hours worked for each day (or assumed hours for exempt employees). Included icons also help inform you when an employee has scheduled leave in the day or hours paid at a premium/overtime rate.

1. Click on a status count on top of the table to refine the employee view to only show those who are in a specific time status (ex. Not Clocked In).
2. Click on today's hours worked total or current time clock status of an employee to view details regarding any reported time entry (as well as the option to open an employee's time clock reporting page).
3. In the settings (⚙️) of the widget, you have the option to show only those employees directly reporting to you displayed in the widget or to also include a selected number of level(s) of those indirectly underneath you. Depending on your team's work schedule, the widget also provides you the option to include/exclude weekends and/or contractor records from the table's display.
